OVERVIEW

Joseph represents primary and excess insurers in complex coverage matters arising under various insurance lines, including general liability, directors and officers, professional liability, and representations and warranties. He has experience litigating declaratory judgment actions, dispositive motions on coverage, bad faith claims, and appellate matters, including before the Massachusetts Appeals Court.

Prior to his insurance coverage practice, Joseph built an extensive appellate litigation practice representing veterans before the U.S. Court of Appeals for Veterans Claims. He drafted more than 20 appellate briefs, all of which resulted in a favorable court decision or settlement with VA counsel. While in law school, Joseph was a student practitioner in a criminal defense clinic. He also worked at a relator's counsel law firm on matters arising out of the False Claims Act.
