OVERVIEW

Kathryn focuses on managing multijurisdictional reviews. She is well-versed in discovery rules and patent, pharmaceutical, and FDA regulation processes, as well as privacy and security regulations such as GDPR.

Kathryn is accountable for setting milestones and achieving deadlines across all phases of the eDiscovery process. This includes advising on suitable technology for data management and retention, planning resources for data collection, specifying data processing and production, analyzing data, and supervising document review. She also helps develop best practices and procedures to ensure that project teams successfully complete projects while maintaining a high level of client service.

REPRESENTATIVE MATTERS

- Led team of attorneys to successfully meet review and production requirements for a Fortune 100 company in a multidistrict litigation matter.
- Created collection, review, and redaction protocols for an international pharmaceutical company to comply with General Data Protection Regulation requirements.
- Utilized document review software and analytics to eliminate hundreds of thousands of nonresponsive documents from review for a Fortune 500 company.
