

Podcasts | December 10, 2024

12 Days of Regulatory Insights: Day 4 – A Focus on the FCA

Regulatory Oversight Podcast

SPEAKERS

Amy Pritchard Williams | Daniel Waltz | Allison O'Neil

In the fourth episode of our 12 Days of Regulatory Insights podcast series, Dan Waltz is joined by colleague Amy Williams, a partner at Troutman Pepper, and Allison O'Neil, co-chair of Locke Lord's White Collar Defense & Investigations practice group. They dive into recent enforcement actions under the False Claims Act (FCA) at both federal and state levels.

The group discusses the FCA, its enforcement mechanisms, and some significant recent cases. Allison explains how the FCA targets those defrauding the government, making it a key tool for fighting fraud. Amy highlights how state-level FCAs, often modeled after the federal statute, can lead to double enforcement in fraud cases.

Looking ahead, Allison predicts more state-level enforcement due to potential uncertainties at the federal level, with states stepping in to fill the gaps. Both Allison and Amy agree that the FCA will stay a crucial enforcement tool, with priorities possibly shifting after changes in administration.

RELATED INDUSTRIES + PRACTICES

- False Claims Act + Other Whistleblower Actions
- White Collar Litigation + Investigations
- State Attorneys General
- Regulatory Investigations, Strategy + Enforcement