Sadia Mirza, an associate in Troutman Pepper's Cybersecurity, Information Governance, and Privacy Practice Group, is quoted in the GovInfoSecurity article, "2 State Cybersecurity, Data Privacy Laws Enacted."

Sadia Mirza, associate at the law firm Troutman Pepper, says Connecticut's cybersecurity bill "incentivizes organizations to implement reasonable security procedures." But regulators may find it challenging to determine exactly what constitutes a "reasonable" security measure.

But the new state privacy laws will encourage organizations to look at their security compliance postures "holistically," says Troutman Pepper's Mirza.
