As experienced government, defense, and in-house counsel, Troutman Pepper Partners Michael S. Lowe and Ashley L. Taylor, Jr., will be joined by Sun Pharmaceutical's Head of Legal Affairs & Senior Director, James Petkun, will provide in-house attorneys with practical insights and pointers about how to successfully navigate government investigations within the unique life sciences regulatory landscape. Discussion topics will include the government's investigation process, the roles of internal and outside counsel, and how business considerations and practical realities can impact defense strategy.

Join their panel, "Navigating Government Investigations in the Life Sciences Industry: Inside, Outside, and Government Perspectives," from 3 – 4 p.m., as they discuss how government investigations present various challenges for life sciences companies, and often require in-house counsel to not only work with outside counsel to manage the investigation externally, but also to navigate the investigation internally from the business, management, and leadership perspectives. Understanding how the government views and conducts such investigations, as well as the strategic considerations of defense counsel and in-house counsel's business-side considerations, can help in-house counsel successfully navigate the minefield that government investigations and enforcement actions entail.
