

Podcasts | April 5, 2023

AI: Overview and Current Regulatory Landscape (Part One)

Regulatory Oversight Podcast

SPEAKERS

Stephen C. Piepgrass | Michael Yaghi | William “Trey” Smith

Join us for the first in a series of episodes covering artificial intelligence (AI). As technology continues to develop, more companies are using AI in their day-to-day business, and with increased use comes increased risk. In this episode, Stephen Piepgrass and colleagues Michael Yaghi and Trey Smith provide an overview of AI, including uses and risks, and the increased focus on AI by various regulators, including state attorneys general, federal agencies, and local governments.

Our panel also offers insights on the potential legal pitfalls that businesses using AI should understand, and what they can do to prevent significant liability exposure to regulators.

Part two of this podcast series will focus on the technology, opportunities, risks, and best practices associated with the use of AI.

RELATED INDUSTRIES + PRACTICES

- Artificial Intelligence
- White Collar Litigation + Investigations
- State Attorneys General