Generative artificial intelligence (AI) is rapidly transforming the corporate landscape, presenting unique challenges for legal, compliance, and human resources departments as they strive to keep pace with its widespread adoption. Many forward-thinking organizations are developing policies to govern the use of these innovative tools. However, the danger lies in adopting a one-size-fits-all policy that fails to consider the unique circumstances of each organization.

In this panel discussion, they will share insights on facing these challenges head-on when developing policies and procedures to balance benefits with legal risks. The panel will explore key questions to ask during the process providing valuable insight and practical tips to consider when navigating this new frontier.
