Troutman Pepper Locke will be participating and offering thought leadership at the Battery Asset Management (BAM) Summit taking place in Bayside, California on November 11-12, 2025. This event represents a fresh initiative in the energy storage sector and addresses industry demands with increased technical depth and operational insights.

On November 12, Lloyd MacNeil will be moderating “The Root of Operational Success: Project Development.” This expert panel brings together industry leaders to explore the critical factors that determine operational success in battery energy storage system (BESS) project development. As the energy transition accelerates globally, properly executed BESS projects are becoming essential components of a resilient, renewable-powered grid. Lloyd will lead a discussion among the panelists on the following topics:

- Pre-development considerations that impact long-term operational performance
- Key technical specifications and design choices that maximize system reliability
- Strategies for effective stakeholder management throughout the development process
- Balancing upfront capital expenditure against lifecycle operational costs
- Regulatory compliance and permitting pathways that minimize operational risks
