

Press Coverage | August 21, 2023

Case Review — Axon Enterprise, Inc. v. Federal Trade Commission

RELATED PROFESSIONALS

Jay A. Dubow | Mary Weeks

In Business Law Today's new video series analyzing major court decisions, Troutman Pepper Partners Jay Dubow and Mary Weeks examine the recent U.S. Supreme Court case Axon Enterprise, Inc. v. Federal Trade Commission. In Axon, the Court held in a 9–0 decision that the “review schemes set out in the Securities Exchange Act and Federal Trade Commission Act do not displace district court jurisdiction” over claims challenging the structure or existence of the SEC or FTC as unconstitutional.

In their conversation, Jay and Mary discuss the history of the Axon case and explicate the reasoning the Supreme Court used in reaching its decision. They delve deep into the broader implications, too, including subsequent litigation; the likely impact on the SEC's enforcement program; and what Axon might portend for challenges to the constitutionality of the administrative law judge process.

Watch the full video.

RELATED INDUSTRIES + PRACTICES

- Federal Trade Commission \(FTC\)
- Securities Investigations + Enforcement
- Securities Litigation
- White Collar Litigation + Investigations