CHARLOTTE – Partner Victoria Alvarez, an experienced trial attorney in Troutman Pepper's Business Litigation Practice Group, has been named among the 2023 "Women in Business" award winners by the Charlotte Business Journal. Alvarez is among 25 of "the Queen city's most influential women" who were selected following an editorial review of their career accomplishments and community involvement.

"I am honored to be recognized alongside such powerful women in the Charlotte area who have made such remarkable impacts on our community," Alvarez said.

An experienced trial attorney, Alvarez uses her courtroom experiences to counsel companies on limiting their liability and exposure. Appearing before state and federal courts, municipalities, public commissions, and international arbitral panels, she often represents real estate developers, manufacturers, retail operators, and utilities. Counseling businesses big and small — from multinational corporations to local partnerships – Alvarez is well equipped to manage even the most complex multifaceted cases.

In addition to her robust practice, Alvarez dedicates substantial time to service and diversity, equity, and inclusion efforts. She currently serves as vice-chair of Troutman Pepper's Latino Caucus and serves as a mentor for associates across the firm. Alvarez is also an active member of the American Bar Association and serves as a commissioner for the Commission on Women in the Profession and as a leader in the Tort, Trial & Insurance Practice Section.

Now in its 27th year, the Women in Business Awards honors 25 outstanding business women from the Charlotte region who have made significant contributions to their professions and to their communities during the past year. Honorees will be recognized at the Charlotte Business Journal's 2023 Women in Business Awards on March 9, 2023, and will be profiled in a special report issued by the publication in March.
