

Press Coverage | July 15, 2022

Clean Energy Work Stunted as Senate Bill Drops Incentives

RELATED PROFESSIONALS

Craig M. Kline

Craig Kline, a partner with Troutman Pepper and founder of the firm's interdisciplinary renewable energy practice, is quoted in the Law360 article, "Clean Energy Work Stunted as Senate Bill Drops Incentives."

"I don't think the failure on the reconciliation legislation is going to dramatically decrease the investment that's coming into the industry," said Craig Kline, the founder of Troutman Pepper's renewable energy practice. "But it will not create an environment for as many new entrants to come into the market."

...

"You can project and hope for the bill that you want," Kline of Troutman Pepper said. "But you have to transact business in the world [that] you have."

RELATED INDUSTRIES + PRACTICES

- Renewable Energy