Welcome to the second edition of Troutman Pepper’s Cyber Capsule, which recaps last month’s noteworthy developments, including updates to reporting rules and cybercrime sharing, and other tidbits of information relating to cybersecurity. From a legislative standpoint, the trend of expanding definitions of personal information, preventing certain governments and agencies from paying ransom demands, and sharing information about attacks continues. We’ve also added a new section, “As the World Turns,” to highlight some of the soap-opera-like comings and goings of ransomware groups.
