Karl Zielaznicki, a partner in Troutman Pepper Locke's Health Care + Life Sciences Intellectual Property Practice Group, was quoted in the October 12, 2025 Axios article, "Dupe Culture Disrupts Retail as Lawsuits Surge Over Copycats."

Lawsuits like Lululemon's can backfire and "unintentionally endorse the quality of a dupe product," Karl Zielaznicki, a trademark lawyer at Troutman Pepper Locke, told Axios.

The bottom line: "Trademark and trade dress cases hinge on demonstrating a likelihood of confusion," Zielaznicki said.

"Consumers often recognize and seek out dupe products as cheaper alternatives rather than the original, making confusion unlikely," he said.
