Insurance Litigation Case Study: Mobile Device Discovery

eMerge was engaged to manage the discovery process in a complex insurance litigation matter where the client faced a fast-approaching discovery deadline involving multiple custodians' mobile devices. The challenge was familiar: collect and prepare relevant mobile data for review and production, while minimizing custodial disruption and protecting unrelated, personal, and confidential client information.

Instead of conducting a complete forensic acquisition of each mobile device, eMerge deployed ModeOne's mobile collection technology to efficiently target only the potentially relevant data for collection. eMerge's ModeOne-powered collections proceed as follows:

- First, eMerge works with the custodian or their IT designee to install the ModeOne application directly on the target Android device or on a computer to which a custodian can connect their iOS device.
- Second, eMerge's collection analysts remotely access the device to identify the specific categories of data subject to collection, such as photos, videos, messages, phone logs, and contacts.

- Third, ModeOne uploads the data to a secure cloud environment.
- Finally, eMerge filters the data as needed and exports the results in a format amenable to efficient review, such as Relativity Short Message Format (RSMF).

Utilizing ModeOne substantially accelerates collection timelines, reduces the risk of overcollection, and safeguards personal and confidential information. On the complex insurance matter, we completed a process that typically takes days in hours, yielding significant downstream review and production savings. eMerge has a variety of collection tools and can identify a defensible approach suitable to each matter.
