Press Coverage | September 1, 2026

Extend and Pretend Era of Real Estate Is No More

RELATED PROFESSIONALS

Mark A. Silverman

Mark A. Silverman, a partner in Troutman Pepper Locke's Bankruptcy + Restructuring Practice Group, was quoted in the September 1, 2026, PERE article, "Extend and Pretend Era of Real Estate Is No More."

> "In 2021-24, we were firmly in the extend-and-pretend era. A lot of people were kicking the can down the road," says Mark Silverman, a partner and leader of the CMBS special servicer practice at law firm Troutman Pepper Locke.
>
> "In 2025, this stopped. Lenders and servicers did not extend loans unless there was a significant pay down in the principal or significant alternative enhancements. This year we are in the land of enforcement."
>
> …
>
> "One thing that is clear is that we're not going to get any major interest rate relief. I don't see inflation going down and that will have an impact on all commercial real estate activity," Silverman says.

RELATED INDUSTRIES + PRACTICES

- Bankruptcy + Restructuring

©2026 Troutman Pepper Locke