Alison Grounds, managing partner of Troutman Pepper eMerge, was quoted in the October 23, 2024 Relativity article, “Harnessing Generative AI: 4 Law Firms Share Lessons Learned.”

“Our firm, as a whole, is interested in making sure we’re at the forefront of generative AI,” Alison Grounds, managing partner, explained. The firm has developed their own in-house AI platform, Athena, and consistently works with clients who are mutually interested in testing new products and sharing success stories.
