Issues of ethics, transparency, and diversity in international arbitration have been a focal point for international arbitration practice for several years. Indeed, as arbitration practitioners and institutions regularly explain, these three issues speak to the legitimacy of arbitration as a whole and are critical to ensure confidence in the system. Panelists Rose Rameau, Jon Greenblatt, and Luis Martinez, will each offer their unique perspectives on how impartiality, transparency, and diversity influence current practices within international arbitration and what users, law firms, and institutions are doing (or should be doing) to advance these overarching goals
