Law360 recently featured the Troutman Pepper Locke and Troutman Strategies Tariff Task Force, which was created to provide comprehensive legal guidance and support to clients following the Trump administration's announcement regarding tariffs on China, Mexico, Canada, and potentially the European Union.

The co-leaders of the Tariff Task Force, Sean McNally, Dan Anziska, Lindsay Austin, and Daniel Gorman, discussed the key objectives of the cross-practice initiative. In the article, the leaders underscored the importance of supporting clients during times of uncertainty, noting that the task force was created to help businesses navigate the complexities and rapidly changing global trade landscape associated with potential new tariffs.

The firm's Tariff Task Force brings together a multidisciplinary group of professionals uniquely positioned to assist global and multinational companies in industries heavily impacted by tariffs, including energy, manufacturers, pharmaceuticals, and automotive. The team is focused on developing strategies that minimize disruptions, optimize supply chains, identify potential cost-saving opportunities, and support advocacy. By staying ahead of key developments, the Tariff Task Force will provide clients with timely insights to help clients understand, adapt, and respond effectively.
