Lending on Government Receivables and Contracts

WRITTEN BY

Richard M. Pollak

Government contractors' performance and lending requirements can change with the slightest turn due to financial regulations, acts of nature and geopolitical occurrences. Knowing you are secure in lending to, or financing, government contractors starts here.

Government contractors' stressors, including, among others, their financial performance, successful contract award, and building the infrastructure to complete the effort, combined with fulfillment of the contract, create pressures much like those when a diamond is created.
