Shout out to Callan Stein and Michael Lowe of Troutman Pepper Hamilton Sanders who knocked out a whistleblower suit accusing their client, real estate investment company ManPow LLC, of making false claims to get loans under the Paycheck Protection Program. Senior U.S. District Judge Virginia Phillips in Los Angeles last week granted summary judgment to ManPow finding that the government's repeated reviews of the company's loan and loan forgiveness applications was "very strong evidence" that the PPP requirements allegedly violated in the case were immaterial.
