Atlanta partner Alison Grounds' article – "More Steps to Choosing Effective E-Discovery Technology Providers" – the second in a two-part series, was published March 13 in the Daily Report. In the article, Alison continues to explain to readers what lawyers need to do in choosing a technology partner to help manage the preservation, collection, filtering, review and production of electronically stored information for trial, arbitration or litigation.

"[These steps] follow the same theme[s] [as steps one and two] and include assessing potential providers' data security measures, pricing and value—and validating your decisions," Alison writes. "Full disclosure: I have the unique perspective of being both a consumer and provider of these services."
