On July 15, the DOI issued a memo introducing multiple new layers of review, including secretary approval, for all permits and approvals, including even ministerial actions, relating to wind and solar projects. As daunting an obstacle as it is, the DOI memo also presents an opportunity for the industry to implement new strategies focused more on the plain language of the relevant statutes.

In this webinar, attorneys in Troutman Pepper Locke's Environmental and Natural Resource Practice Group will discuss new strategies and approaches to compliance. They will also discuss how this approach can streamline the development process and reduce the regulatory burden on an industry that is under siege. Finally, the team will be joined by a member of Troutman Pepper Locke's Project Finance practice to provide insight into the financeability of projects utilizing these strategies.
