2023 State AG Year in Review

2023 STATE AG YEAR IN REVIEW

By Troutman Pepper State Attorneys General Team

State attorneys general (AGs) continue their role as innovators, shaping the regulatory environment by utilizing their expertise and resources to influence policy and practice. The public-facing nature of the AGs’ office across the U.S. compels responses to constituent concerns on abbreviated timetables. This political sensitivity, coupled with the AGs’ ability to bring the full power of the sovereign to address local and national issues alike, demonstrates why the AGs may be the most formidable authority in the current regulatory environment.

NJ CHARGES INTO 2024 WITH NEW PRIVACY LAW

By James Koenig, Ronald I. Raether, Jr., Kim Phan, Stephen C. Piepgrass, Gene Fishel & Robyn Lin

On January 16, New Jersey became the first state this year to enact a comprehensive privacy law, S332, which applies to businesses conducting operations in the state or targeting its residents. As noted in this article by our privacy team, similar to other state comprehensive privacy laws, S322 grants consumers the right to confirm, correct, delete, obtain a copy of their personal data, and opt out of its processing for targeted advertising, sale, or profiling. Controllers and processors are obligated to limit data collection, establish security practices, and provide a privacy notice. They are also required to conduct a data protection assessment for processing activities that pose a heightened risk of harm to consumers. The New Jersey Attorney General's Office has exclusive authority to enforce violations, treating them as "unlawful practices" under the New Jersey Consumer Fraud Act. The law takes effect on January 16, 2025, with an 18-month grace period for organizations to correct violations before enforcement actions are taken.

NAVIGATING STATE AG INVESTIGATIONS: LESSONS FROM TIKTOK'S EXPERIENCE

By Ashley L. Taylor, Jr., Robert Angle & Mackenzie W.J. Jessup

In a recent case involving TikTok and the state of North Carolina, the social media giant was compelled to produce detailed information for 98,000 meetings, despite its claim that this violated its Fourth Amendment rights. As noted by Troutman Pepper's Ashley Taylor, Robert Angle and Mackenzie Jessup in a recent article for Law360, this case highlights the differences between responding to state investigations and standard civil litigation.

FTC TO HOLD HEARING ON PROPOSED RULE TO BAN FAKE REVIEWS

By Clayton Friedman, Drew Mann, Tim Bado & Abbey M. Thornhill

Most products with an online marketing presence generally have “customer reviews.” However, today’s consumers cannot always trust that those reviews are from real purchasers or provide honest feedback about the quality of a product. The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) has sought to address these concerns, proposing a new rule aimed at stopping marketers from using illicit review and endorsement practices, including using fake reviews, suppressing honest negative reviews, and paying for positive reviews. Proponents of the rule argue these types of practices deceive consumers who are looking for honest feedback on a product or service.

AGS URGE THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT TO REGULATE AI IN TELEMARKETING

By Troutman Pepper State Attorneys General Team

North Carolina Attorney General (AG) Josh Stein led a bipartisan effort urging the federal government to impose stricter regulations on the use of artificial intelligence (AI) in telemarketing. The collective push involved 26 state AGs who jointly submitted a letter in response to the Federal Communication Commission (FCC’s) Notice of Inquiry (NOI) for “Implications of Artificial Intelligence Technologies on Protecting Consumers from Unwanted Robocalls and Robotexts. The FCC’s NOI furthers efforts by the Federal Government to better understand the impact of emerging AI technologies as it aims to protect consumers from unwanted and illegal telephone calls and text messages, as stipulated under Telephone Consumer Protection Act (TCPA).”

MULTIPLE STATES CONSIDER ESTABLISHING VAPOR PRODUCT DIRECTORIES

By Bryan Haynes, Agustin Rodriguez & Zie Alere

This year, several state legislatures will consider bills to establish vapor product directories. Amid heightened scrutiny of illicit vapor products by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA), these product directory bills would create a mechanism for states to bar the sale of products that are not FDA-authorized or subject to a pending premarket application. Like state cigarette directories implemented in connection with the tobacco Master Settlement Agreement, these directories would specify which vapor products are permitted to be sold in the state.

FROM "HIGH POTENTIAL FOR ABUSE" TO "ACCEPTED MEDICAL USE": TRACKING DEVELOPMENTS AND POSSIBLE OUTCOMES OF FEDERAL CANNABIS RESCHEDULING IN THE U.S.

By Jean Smith-Gonnell & Cole White

Whether you believe that cannabis legalization has occurred too quickly or too slowly, one thing is certain: recent developments herald a potentially seismic shift in federal cannabis policy in the U.S. Reflecting on our article from September, which discussed the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' \(HHS\) recommendation to the Drug Enforcement Administration \(DEA\) to reschedule cannabis from Schedule I to Schedule III of the Controlled Substances Act \(CSA\), it is clear that the landscape continues to evolve rapidly. Since that publication, numerous noteworthy developments have unfolded, along with a growing discourse on the potential unintended consequences of such a reclassification. This article aims to catch readers up on the latest developments in federal cannabis legalization.

PENNSYLVANIA SEEKS TO INCREASE COMPETITION AMONG MEDICAL CANNABIS LICENSEES WITH SB773 PASSAGE

By Christina Sava, Jean Smith-Gonnell & Agustin Rodriguez

Recently enacted Pennsylvania Senate Bill 773 \(SB773\) introduces several amendments intended to expand opportunities and increase competition among existing cannabis licensees in Pennsylvania. The bill seeks to support independent licensees in the state and is a response to the consolidation among licensees that many states have seen as state-legal marijuana operators struggle under the weight of federal prohibition and competition from the unregulated marketplace.

NAVIGATING THE STORM: RECEIVERSHIPS IN THE CANNABIS INDUSTRY

By Jean Smith-Gonnell & Cole White

With rapid technological advances, expanded regulatory oversight, and constantly shifting market dynamics, owning and operating a business in the modern world has become an increasingly difficult challenge. Chief among the challenges that business owners face is the likelihood of financial distress, a daunting scenario that can arise from market downturns, management issues, or unexpected crises. When a business finds itself in financial turmoil, it is crucial that business owners and investors have viable options for navigating these challenges. Traditionally, bankruptcy is the primary avenue of relief for distressed businesses, offering a structured way to address financial woes and creditor claims.

THE CONTINUING NEGATIVE IMPACT OF FEDERAL AND STATE TAXATION ON THE CANNABIS INDUSTRY; WHERE DO WE GO FROM HERE?

By Jean Smith-Gonnell & Randy Varner

The cannabis industry has experienced significant growth over the past decade, with increasing numbers of states legalizing both medical and recreational use. Currently, cannabis is legal for adults in 24 states and the District of Columbia, and medical cannabis is legal in 38 states and the District of Columbia. However, despite the industry's rapid expansion, it faces a unique and significant challenge in the form of Internal Revenue Code Section 280E (IRC §280E).^[1] This federal tax code provision has a profound negative impact on the profitability of cannabis businesses and causes those businesses to constantly evaluate their operational strategies. In addition to IRC §280E and other federal tax challenges, the industry also faces significant state tax burdens.

REDACTED CANNABIS RESCHEDULING LETTER IGNITES FOIA EXEMPTION DEBATE

By Stephen C. Piepgrass, Agustin Rodriguez, Jean Smith-Gonnell & Cole White

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) has drawn criticism for heavily redacting a recommendation letter to the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) concerning the rescheduling of cannabis. HHS said the redactions were justified under Exemption 5 of the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), which protects inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters that would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency. As Stephen C. Piepgrass, Agustin E. Rodriguez, Jean Smith-Gonnell, and Cole White noted in a recent article published by Law360, this has sparked debates about the balance between necessary secrecy and the public's right to government information. Legal challenges to these redactions are expected. The deliberative process privilege, which safeguards deliberative discussions within government corridors, is often invoked in the context of FOIA.
