ARE PLASTICS THE NEW PFAS?

By Clayton Friedman, Andrea Wortzel, Blake Christopher, and Liz Glusman

A recent conference led by Connecticut Attorney General (AG) William Tong discussed the alleged problems and potential solutions associated with plastics use and waste. Conference attendees included nearly two dozen representatives from state AG offices, medical and public health researchers, and leaders in the recycling and reclamation industry. Conversations focused on plastics' tendency to break down in the environment and, as a result, expose people and the environment to harmful chemicals. The concerns surrounding plastics in many ways parallel the concerns surrounding PFAS, an industry targeted recently by civil and criminal enforcement actions in multiple states. Businesses up and down the plastics supply chain should take note and prepare for potential state actions that put plastics in the crosshairs.

STATES' ACTION STILL VIABLE DESPITE BAN OF FTC NONCOMPETE RULE

By Ryan J. Strasser and Mackenzie W.J. Jessup

This article was originally published on September 18, 2024 on Bloomberg Law and is republished here with permission.

The Northern District of Texas's nationwide ban on the Federal Trade Commission's noncompete rule isn't a complete bar to government enforcement. The rule sought to curb unfair methods of competition and would have voided employees' noncompete provisions. It required employers to send notice that noncompete agreements are no longer enforceable.

By Troutman Pepper State Attorneys General Team and Kaitlin Clemens

Earlier this year, Governor Josh Shapiro signed amendments to Pennsylvania's Breach of Personal Information Notification Act (BPINA) into law, which go into effect on September 26. As part of the implementation of these requirements, Pennsylvania Attorney General (AG) Michelle Henry announced the launch of an online portal for companies and other entities to report data breaches that impact more than 500 Pennsylvania residents. As with notification to impacted individuals, covered entities must notify the AG “without unreasonable delay.” This new requirement aligns Pennsylvania's data breach notification law with the 35 states that have existing notice requirements for the applicable state regulator when a threshold number of state residents are impacted. Many of these states utilize a similar portal for submissions for ease of reporting.

TEXAS AG CHALLENGES HHS PRIVACY RULES

By Gene Fishel, Brent Hoard, Joel Lutz, and Susie Lloyd

On September 4, Texas Attorney General (AG) Ken Paxton filed a lawsuit against the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) Office for Civil Rights (OCR), challenging two key Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA) rules — the 2000 Privacy Rule and the newly implemented 2024 Privacy Rule. These rules were enacted to protect the privacy of individuals' protected health information (PHI) under HIPAA. Texas argues that these rules unlawfully limit state investigators' ability to access PHI, impeding the enforcement of state laws.

FDA TO ENFORCE CIGARETTE GRAPHIC WARNING RULE IN DECEMBER 2025, PENDING LITIGATION MAY INTERFERE

By Bryan Haynes, Agustin Rodriguez, Michael Jordan, and Zie Alere

In September, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) announced that it would begin enforcing the agency's cigarette graphic warning rule in December 2025, in an enforcement policy outlined in a short guidance document. Although a federal district court previously found the rule unconstitutional, an appeals court reversed that decision, and the final rule is now in effect. According to the guidance, FDA will not begin enforcement until December 2025 at the earliest, but we believe it likely that the rule might yet again be postponed or vacated, as it remains the subject of ongoing litigation.

FDA PROPOSES SUBMISSION TRACKING NUMBER REQUIREMENT FOR ENDS IMPORTS

By Bryan Haynes, Agustin Rodriguez, and Zie Alere

In August, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) issued a new proposed rule that would require importers of electronic nicotine delivery system (ENDS) products to provide an FDA-issued submission tracking number (STN) to U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) for imports of such products. MISSOURI GOVERNOR'S EFFORTS TO BAN UNREGULATED PSYCHOACTIVE CANNABIS PRODUCTS MEETS RESISTANCE

By Jean Smith-Gonnell, Jeff Johnson, and Nick Ramos

On August 1, Missouri Governor Michael Parson issued Executive Order 24-10 (the EO), a bold move aimed at addressing consumer safety concerns surrounding unregulated psychoactive cannabis products. The EO sparked a legal battle with the Missouri Hemp Trade Association (MO Hemp), which claims that by designating these products as adulterated and imposing an embargo under the EO, the Missouri Department of Health and Senior Services (DHSS) violated Missouri law. The governor's action is yet another example of a state taking aggressive steps to address gaps left by the lack of federal regulations to ensure consumer safety in the burgeoning industrial hemp industry.

NCAA DRUG TESTING & CANNABINOIDS: A BREAK-UP STORY

By Jean Smith-Gonnell and Carmen Williams

I. Introduction

The National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) is the largest governing body in college athletics. The NCAA regulates all aspects of student athletics among 1,100 schools in the United States. It also organizes the athletic programs for over 500,000 collegiate student athletes. Part and parcel to their governance of collegiate athletics is the NCAA's responsibility for maintaining the integrity of competition by conducting drug testing procedures for student athletes under their purview. On June 26, 2024, the NCAA removed cannabis from its banned drugs list for Division I college football championship and post-season. This decision has significant legal and policy implications that extend beyond the realm of collegiate athletics. Arguably, this decision is a part of the evolving public perception of marijuana.
