

Podcasts | June 20, 2024

Revisiting Financial Institution Incentive Compensation Rules Under Dodd-Frank

The Consumer Finance Podcast

SPEAKERS

Chris J. Willis | Sheri P. Adler | Jina Davidovich

In this episode of The Consumer Finance Podcast, Chris Willis delves into the renewed focus on incentive compensation by federal financial regulators. Joined by colleagues Sheri Adler and Jina Davidovich from the Employee Benefits and Executive Compensation group, the discussion centers on the implications of Section 956 of the Dodd-Frank Act. The episode explores the historical context, proposed rule changes, and the potential impact on financial institutions and their employees. Key topics include the scope of covered institutions, specific requirements for senior executives and significant risk-takers, and the governance and compliance obligations that may arise if the rules are enacted.

RELATED INDUSTRIES + PRACTICES

- Consumer Financial Services
- Employee Benefits + Executive Compensation