Robert Gallagher and Joseph Imperiale were quoted in the January 2, 2024 The Legal Intelligencer article, "Troutman Pepper Appoints Six New Office Managing Partners."

"First and foremost, I always want to focus on supporting the talent that's in this office," Imperiale said. "Any way I can do that to continue to make this the best platform for our lawyers and other professionals to serve the clients is going to be my principal goal."

"Our culture really is important here. ... It's allowed us to retain a lot of the talent we have," Gallagher explained. "We want to cultivate practice growth, teamwork, and mentorship."

"Within the practice group, I've served various roles, including training our young lawyers," Imperiale said. "I very much believe in the talent that's in this building. ... I'm well placed to connect with talent in a way that continues to serve our clients at the highest level."

...

"I grew up in this office, and I've always been proud of what we can do in the Pittsburgh team," Gallagher said. "I think that shows ... so does my sincere appreciation for the culture we have here, one I've thrived in and enjoyed seeing others thrive in."

...

"It looks like we're going to have a strong year for 2023, and we'd like to improve on that even more," said Gallagher, who is looking to add depth in the Pittsburgh office's energy, financial services, health care, IP, real estate, and insurance practices.

“We would like to grow specifically in some of those industries where we think there’s going to be continuing demand,” Gallagher explained. “These are all areas where we see significant growth and we know we need to retain and attract talent in those areas.”

“In Philadelphia, we’re a large office, we’re an office that’s very important to the firm’s goals,” Imperiale said. “In terms of practice groups, we really have a diversity of practices. ... I want to continue to foster the strength and diversity of our practices.”

“I also want to connect folks within our offices so we can serve our clients in Philadelphia and Pennsylvania and across all of our offices,” he added. “The future is very bright for Troutman and the Philadelphia office in particular.”
