ATLANTA – Payment processors, money transmitters, third party senders, banks, lenders, fintechs, and other financial technology businesses are facing more rules and increased scrutiny from regulators and self-regulatory organizations, as well as heightened consumer expectations. Hosted by attorneys Keith Barnett, Carlin McCrory, and Josh McBeain, Troutman Pepper’s latest podcast, Payments Pros, offers insights from attorneys, business leaders, and regulatory experts on the most challenging legal and regulatory concerns confronted by participants in the payments industry. The Troutman Pepper team provides ongoing analysis on financial services developments through the firm’s Consumer Financial Services blog – Consumer Financial Services Law Monitor.

“Financial technology is constantly evolving and changing the game of financial services. We’re excited to be a part of this important conversation,” said Barnett, who is part of Troutman Pepper’s Fintech and Payments practice. “This podcast is the one-stop shop for everything related to payments. We discuss government rules, private industry rules, faster payments, the ACH rails, the card rails, money transmission, convenience fees, surcharges, FBO accounts, and more.”

The Troutman Pepper Fintech and Payments team regularly advises every sector of the payments industry on corporate, compliance, regulatory, enforcement and litigation issues.

Troutman Pepper has more than 200 attorneys who regularly advise financial services providers and is nationally recognized for its prowess in the space. In 2021, Troutman Pepper was named FinTech Law Firm of the Year by The Deal, becoming the first firm to receive the award.
