PROVIDENCE – Troutman Pepper Locke advised VODA.ai, a Boston-based SaaS company that uses artificial intelligence to enhance decision-making for water utilities, in raising its series A financing round. For more information, see the press release.

Funding was led by CRH Ventures with participation from L-Stone Capital. The investment will support VODA.ai's growth, expand its research and development capabilities, and accelerate innovation to better serve municipal utilities and private water operators worldwide. Founded in 2017, VODA.ai's platform helps utilities manage aging water infrastructure by providing AI-driven predictive analytics to assess pipe condition and risk across transmission, distribution, and collection systems.

The Troutman Pepper Locke team that advised VODA.ai was led by Chris Graham and included Jennifer Lisi, Adam Millard, and Michaela Conley.
