AG OF THE WEEK

Steve Marshall, Alabama

Steve Marshall was sworn in as the 48th attorney general (AG) of the state of Alabama on February 10, 2017. Initially appointed to the position, he was subsequently elected by Alabama voters to full terms and has served as the state's chief legal officer throughout his tenure. In this capacity, he has overseen criminal prosecutions, represented the state in civil and appellate matters, and provided legal guidance to state agencies and officials on issues affecting public policy and state governance. Having reached term limits in the AG's office, Marshall is currently running for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by Senator Tommy Tuberville, who is running for governor in 2026.

Before becoming AG, Marshall served for 16 years as the district attorney for Marshall County. As district attorney, he prosecuted a broad range of criminal cases, worked with local and state law enforcement agencies, and managed the operations of the district attorney's office in a largely rural jurisdiction. His responsibilities included overseeing jury trials, coordinating with victim services, and supervising staff in the office.

Marshall received his undergraduate degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, graduating with academic honors. He earned his law degree from The University of Alabama School of Law, also with academic honors. While in law school, he was a member of the Alabama Law Review and was selected for membership in the Order of the Coif.

Marshall and his wife, Tammy, share three children and maintain longstanding ties to their community in Alabama.

- Marshall joined other state AGs in an amicus brief urging the U.S. Supreme Court to review a Ninth Circuit decision upholding the Los Angeles Unified School District's COVID-19 vaccine mandate, under which more than 500 employees were fired.
