AG OF THE WEEK

Letitia James, New York

Letitia James is the 67th attorney general (AG) of the state of New York. Elected in 2018, she has focused on protecting vulnerable residents and ensuring accountability for individuals and companies that violate state laws. During her first term, James secured more than $7.5 billion for New York, including more than $2.5 billion from opioid manufacturers and distributors for their roles in the opioid epidemic. Her office has removed more than 4,000 guns from New York communities, dismantled numerous drug and gun trafficking rings, and taken legal action to curb the spread of ghost guns.

Prior to serving as AG, James was the public advocate for New York City, where her tenure saw the passage of more legislation than all previous public advocates combined, including a law banning questions about salary history in the employment process to address the gender wage gap. Before her role as public advocate, James represented Brooklyn's 35th Council District in the New York City Council for a decade, where she passed the Safe Housing Act to improve living conditions for tenants in the city's worst buildings. Earlier in her career, she led the Brooklyn Regional Office of the New York State AG's office and began her legal career as a public defender at the Legal Aid Society.

James is a graduate of Lehman College and Howard University School of Law and is a lifelong Brooklyn resident.

New York AG in the News:

- James issued a consumer alert to New York residents, reminding them of their utilities rights as temperatures start to drop.
- James released a statement supporting the Northern District of New York dismissal of the U.S. Department of Justice's lawsuit challenging New York's Protect Our Courts Act.
- James urged the federal government to extend Temporary Protected Status to Jamaicans following the devastation of Hurricane Melissa.
