New York – Troutman Pepper Locke's Construction Practice Group was recognized among Law360's Practice Groups of the Year. Marking its third year receiving this prestigious recognition, the firm was among only five to receive the 2024 Practice Group of the Year designation in the Construction category.

"We are proud of the repeat recognition, which serves as a great testament to our national presence in some of the most sophisticated construction projects," said Michael Subak, who leads the firm's Construction Practice Group. "We are thrilled to be at the forefront of this dynamic market and are committed to maintaining the exceptional level of client service that's worthy of such national acclaim."

"What truly sets Troutman Pepper Locke apart is our ability to excel in both high-quality transactional work and high-stakes litigation within the construction sector," said partner Aaron Abraham. "This dual strength is a key differentiator that enables us to provide a comprehensive and unparalleled client experience."

Troutman Pepper Locke's Construction Practice Group is comprised of more than 50 attorneys solely focused on the construction industry, and counsels clients on some of the largest, most sophisticated construction projects in the world. It is among the leading firms in total number of complex disputes tried and won in federal and state courts nationwide and arbitration forums domestic and international. Projects have included airport terminals, complex high rises, commercial office buildings, warehouse spaces, universities, medical buildings, stadia, wind and solar energy-related projects, and high-dollar international projects. The practice has been nationally recognized by Chambers, Best Law Firms[®], and local publications across the country.

Law360 received nearly 800 submissions for its practice-based awards, now in its 15th year. Editors selected winners based on several criteria, including matter strength and notability and general practice excellence.
