Jay Dubow, co-leader of Troutman Pepper Locke's Securities Investigations + Enforcement Practice Group, was quoted in the November 13, 2025 Cointelegraph article, "US SEC, CFTC Operations Set to Resume After 43-Day Government Shutdown."

"I'm sure some [companies] took the position that they could just submit [an application to the SEC] knowing it's not going to be looked at until they get back, but at least they're in the queue," Jay Dubow, a partner at law firm Troutman Pepper Locke, told Cointelegraph.

He also warned of the possible ramifications of the SEC going through repeated shutdowns:

"Every time you go through something like this, there's the risk of things just slipping through the cracks in various ways."
