OVERVIEW

Allie is an associate whose practice focuses on consumer privacy, data protection, and financial services litigation and regulatory compliance. She has represented a broad range of clients — including consumer reporting agencies, background screening companies, financial institutions, and fintech lenders — in matters arising under the FCRA, FDCPA, TCPA, RICO, and a variety of state consumer protection and privacy statutes.

Allie has developed substantial experience defending individual and class action claims in federal and state courts across the U.S., with particular depth in matters involving consumer data accuracy obligations, reinvestigation requirements, and the interplay between credit reporting and privacy law. She manages complex, fast-moving dockets across multiple jurisdictions simultaneously, tracking each matter closely and keeping clients informed at every stage. She also advises clients on regulatory compliance issues, including FCRA compliance programs, privacy counseling, responses to regulatory inquiries, and pre-litigation demand resolution.
