Andrew represents clients in a broad range of employment and business disputes, including trade secrets, restrictive covenants, ERISA benefits, minority shareholders, and wage and hour litigation. His experience across a variety of industry sectors informs his strategic and practical approach.

OVERVIEW

Andrew is a litigator who represents executives, professionals, and corporate clients in a broad range of disputes. His clients span industries such as finance, insurance, health care, defense contractors, food service, investment advisors, higher education, and a variety of manufacturers from tobacco to cosmetics. Andrew is particularly experienced in restrictive covenant disputes, ERISA benefits litigation, FLSA class/collective actions, executive and health care professional employment, trade secrets litigation, and minority shareholder matters.

Andrew has successfully defended clients in cases involving wrongful termination, discrimination, harassment, retaliation, wage and hour disputes, misappropriation of trade secrets, and breach of employment contracts in state and federal courts across the U.S. He has managed class action cases under federal and state law, as well as Sarbanes-Oxley, Dodd-Frank retaliation, False Claims Act retaliation, Title VII, ADA/Rehabilitation Act, ADEA, REDA, and FMLA disputes. Andrew also works with universities on a variety of disputes involving faculty contracts, including academic freedom matters.

Before joining the firm, Andrew worked in the North Carolina General Assembly as a policy advisor. He also served as the lead house liaison for the Unemployment Insurance Study Committee, and as chief clerk for the House Finance Committee and Occupancy Tax Subcommittee. Andrew's prior work experience has helped him understand the law through the legislative and judicial sectors.
