Brad is a corporate attorney who counsels businesses, their leadership, and individual founders and executives on their key transactions. He leverages experience across diverse industries and an in-depth understanding of his clients' businesses to develop straightforward strategies that help clients achieve their goals.

OVERVIEW

Brad represents public and private companies, sponsors, family offices, founders, and executive teams on various aspects of corporate and securities transactions, including mergers and acquisitions, securities offerings, financings, corporate governance, business entity formations, joint ventures, and general corporate matters. He is experienced in a broad range of industries, including payments, fintech, financial services, banks, and manufacturing.

Drawing from his experience with clients on all sides of sophisticated transactions, Brad also assists with employment agreements and incentive arrangements for executives. He often serves as his clients' primary outside counsel.
