OVERVIEW

Brandon works with clients of all sizes, from solo inventors and startups building their first portfolios to multinational corporations managing global patent strategies.

Before practicing law, Brandon spent several years as a medical device professional, where he played a role in the implementation and use of devices during surgical procedures in the operating room. This experience provides him with a practical perspective on innovation and allows him to connect technical details with real-world business needs. While he has a background in medical devices, his work also spans financial technologies, bioinformatics, consumer products, and more.

Brandon's practice covers the entire life cycle of patents, including helping clients protect their inventions, enforce their rights, license their technologies, and ultimately maximize the value of their IP. He also represents clients in e-commerce and online marketplace disputes, including Amazon-related matters, and has been involved in Schedule A cases in both the Northern District of Illinois and the Southern District of Florida.
