OVERVIEW

Chelsey focuses her practice on environmental and state energy law, providing comprehensive support to clients across various industries. She handles matters involving regulatory enforcement, compliance, permitting, due diligence, and litigation. Additionally, as a member of the firm's State Energy Regulation practice, she assists clients with proceedings before the Virginia State Corporation Commission.

Chelsey offers strategic advice on the environmental implications of business operations, including managing emerging contaminants like PFAS, within an ever-evolving regulatory landscape to help clients achieve their business objectives. She is also committed to pro bono work, focusing on wrongful convictions.
