Chris focuses on complex commercial litigation and class action defense for clients across the financial services, securitization, fintech, health care, and insurance sectors. With experience spanning federal and state courts nationwide, he brings a practical, results-oriented approach to some of the most consequential disputes his clients face.

OVERVIEW

Chris is a seasoned litigator with a focus on complex commercial litigation and class action defense. He handles class actions and commercial disputes for banks, trusts, fintech companies, securitization parties, private equity firms, portfolio companies, asset managers, loan servicers, insurance companies, and health care companies. Over the years, Chris has also advised many of those clients on general risk management, litigation prevention, and certain high-stakes labor and employment issues, including trade secret misappropriation. Beyond the courtroom, he serves as a trusted business advisor, helping clients identify and neutralize litigation risk before it becomes a liability, and translating complex legal exposure into practical decisions that protect the bottom line.

Chris has extensive experience in New York and New Jersey state courts, as well as federal courts nationwide.

Chris regularly provides pro bono services to KIND, a leading organization founded by Angelina Jolie and the Microsoft Corporation dedicated to providing compassionate and quality legal counsel to unaccompanied refugee and immigrant children in the U.S. He appears in state and federal courts to represent numerous unaccompanied children who enter the U.S. immigration system alone to help advance their best interests, safety, and well-being. Chris secured permanent residency for five children. His dedication to this work reflects a core belief that skilled legal advocacy should extend beyond the boardroom.

Before attending law school, Chris competed as a student athlete at Seton Hall University, playing baseball in the Big East Conference — an experience that instilled the discipline, teamwork, and competitive drive he brings to every matter. After concluding his baseball career, Chris earned his J.D. from Seton Hall, with honors.
