OVERVIEW

Chris advises public and privately held companies, private equity firms and their portfolio companies, and individual executives on a wide range of executive compensation and employee benefit matters, including in connection with mergers and acquisitions and other business transactions. He regularly counsels clients on the design, implementation, and administration of equity and cash incentive arrangements as well as the applicable tax, securities law, corporate governance, and disclosure implications of those arrangements. Chris also represents clients negotiating executive employment and separation agreements.

In his pro bono work, Chris advises nonprofit organizations on human resource-related matters and represents clients in no-fault divorce proceedings.
