Crighton advises clients on complex insurance coverage matters under all manner of policies. Whether litigating a bad faith action or helping insurers and their insureds resolve high-exposure claims, Crighton brings a strong commercial perspective to his practice and understands the nuances of handling claims involving sophisticated insureds and insurers.

OVERVIEW

Crighton focuses his practice on insurance coverage and litigation. He regularly counsels London Market insurers and major domestic insurers on policies involving professional liability for architects, engineers, and other design professionals; lawyers professional liability; commercial general liability; malicious attack; environmental; first-party property and business interruption; and excess coverage. He litigates complex insurance coverage actions on behalf of insurers across the U.S. Crighton advises clients on pre-litigation issues such as claims investigation and handling, policy limit settlement demands, and defense and indemnity obligations. In addition to his coverage litigation practice, Crighton frequently serves as insurers' monitoring counsel in high-exposure casualty claims.

In 2025, Crighton spent five months seconded to a leading Lloyd's syndicate, where he managed a portfolio of complex North American general liability and professional liability claims. Through that experience, he gained a unique understanding of the London insurance market and the vital role the relationships between brokers, insureds, insurers, and insurers' counsel play in the claims resolution process and valuable insights into what insurer clients need and expect from their outside counsel.
