Kyle is a trial attorney with experience at both the trial and appellate levels in state and federal courts throughout the U.S., helping his clients achieve efficient and practical resolution of disputes.

OVERVIEW

Kyle is managing partner of the firm's Raleigh office. He has extensive experience both serving as the first chair in jury trials and handling appeals in state and federal courts throughout the U.S. His practice primarily involves the representation of financial institutions, loan servicers and mortgage investors, in lender liability actions, real property financing disputes, foreclosures, and other commercial disputes.

In addition, he has represented individuals and businesses in various foreclosure matters, real property matters and bankruptcy cases, as well as with respect to various claims involving breach of contract, business torts, breach of fiduciary duty, professional liability, legal and professional malpractice, product liability, and construction issues. Kyle has also represented local governments and law enforcement officers against complaints involving civil rights and use of force.

Kyle has appeared and argued extensively in trial and appellate courts in North Carolina, West Virginia, Alabama, California, Illinois, Georgia, Virginia, Oklahoma, and the District of Columbia. He is a member of the Virginia, North Carolina, District of Columbia, and West Virginia bars.

Kyle is a graduate of the Raleigh Chamber of Commerce Leadership Raleigh Program (2012-2013 class), which pairs leaders in the community for a yearlong series of sessions to engage in and discuss community issues and community development. Further, Kyle is a graduate of Class XXI of Leadership North Carolina (2013-2014 class), a program similar to Leadership Raleigh, albeit with a statewide scope.

Kyle also volunteers as a coach for his sons' youth lacrosse teams and his community swim team.
