Erin partners with business and financial services clients across a range of industries to help them mitigate risks, ensure regulatory compliance, and resolve nationwide litigation.

OVERVIEW

Erin represents public and private companies and financial services institutions — including banks, lenders, loan servicers, retail financing entities, and fintechs — in class actions, mass actions, and high-stakes commercial disputes nationwide. She leverages deep industry knowledge to navigate complex litigation in state and federal courts and arbitration, including matters involving exclusive provider agreements, vendor and merchant disputes, call center services, lending and loan servicing practices, credit reporting, and banking and investment services. Erin also resolves commercial property and lien priority disputes for lenders, loan servicers, and retail property managers.

In addition to her litigation practice, Erin advises clients on regulatory, compliance, and risk management matters. She partners closely with business and legal teams to audit and refine operations to align with state and federal requirements. Erin's work includes reviewing licensing and credit reporting compliance; auditing loan documentation and servicing practices; securing certifications for national banks and their operating subsidiaries; and implementing policy and procedure changes to meet statutory, regulatory, and contractual obligations.

Erin excels at developing robust strategies for contract disputes and crafting practical exit paths designed to safeguard profitability. She keeps clients ahead of emerging laws and opinions and translates legal developments into clear guidance on business impact.

Before joining the firm, Erin represented engineers and construction professionals in complex construction disputes and managed litigation in both commercial and consumer defense cases. That experience provides a strong foundation for Erin's advocacy: she is a focused litigator and skilled negotiator who understands her clients' business priorities and sensitivities.
