OVERVIEW

Gary represents major financial institutions in complex litigation involving contractual disputes and alleged violations of consumer financial regulations. In addition to handling all aspects of litigation, including trial, dispositive motion practice, and evidentiary hearings, he advises clients on the risks associated with emerging technologies and digital services, including cookie policies and tracking practices. Gary is a Certified Information Privacy Professional (CIPP/US).

Gary draws from a long track record of financial services litigation. His background includes serving as lead trial counsel for financial institutions in consumer finance and large-scale foreclosure matters, compliance disputes, and claims involving the UCC. Gary's exposure to a wide range of claims enables him to provide clients with tailored and informed strategies.
