Geoff focuses on state and local taxation, representing taxpayers in a wide range of state income, franchise, sales and use, hotel occupancy, severance, and ad valorem tax matters, including substantial economic development incentives work.

OVERVIEW

Geoff represents taxpayers in state tax controversy matters, including audits, administrative hearings, and judicial forums.

Geoff also frequently advises clients on Texas and multistate tax minimization and compliance structuring for complex business transactions, with transaction sizes ranging from a few million dollars to multi-billion dollars. He has developed and pursued state tax refund strategies for clients, generating tens of millions of dollars in tax refunds.

Similarly, Geoff has broad experience assisting clients in identifying and claiming all manner of state and local economic development incentives in Texas and in other states, such as property tax abatements, economic development grants, tax sharing agreements, and infrastructure reimbursements.

REPRESENTATIVE MATTERS

- Secured multiple rulings from the state of Texas and local taxing jurisdictions, concluding that several major public/private partnership clients building sports facilities and hotel conference facilities were exempt from ad valorem taxation and could claim exemption from Texas sales and use tax on construction materials.
- Regularly provides buy- and sell-side multistate income, sales, ad valorem, and real property transfer tax analysis, agreement drafting, and structuring for equity and asset transactions, collectively addressing transactions involving business operations in nearly every state.
- Voluntary disclosures (VDAs) to resolve self-identified prior unpaid state taxes on behalf of multiple clients and collectively involving VDAs in most states.
