George represents major financial institutions and public companies in their high-value transactions. His big-picture thinking and deep market insights make him go-to counsel for their most important deals.

OVERVIEW

George represents banks, finance companies, public and private investment funds, and other financial institutions. He also serves as outside counsel to public companies in the financial services and media industries. George's clientele spans private equity funds and their portfolio companies, investment funds, and investor groups engaged in investments and acquisitions.

George's extensive experience covers acquisitions and financings across various industries, with a particular focus on financial services and technology, media, and telecommunications sectors. His practice includes debt capital market transactions, high-yield debt, syndicated loan financings, restructurings, securitization, second lien, and mezzanine financings. George also advises private equity portfolio companies and other operating companies in communications and financial services.
