Hanna provides practical and strategic advice, whether negotiating an executive entry/exit, protecting the company's trade secrets/talent, or advising on sensitive investigations and compliance issues. Her experience helps employers in developing processes and documentation to prevent and mitigate risks.

OVERVIEW

Board certified in Labor and Employment Law, Hanna advises and litigates for employers in matters regarding executives, employees, or contractors, particularly regarding executive agreements, trade secret and restrictive covenant matters, and board or workplace investigations. Hanna also represents businesses in matters regarding accessibility for persons with disabilities, including due diligence for deals, defending claims, and proactive compliance for every type of building or feature, such as services and communications. Hanna handles multifamily housing Fair Housing compliance issues, including design and construction, discrimination, reasonable accommodations and modifications, and defends claims of FHA violations.

Hanna's experience includes working with entities of various sizes and in every stage of development, from private-equity or family office-backed startups or new acquisitions to well-established global companies, in various industries, including energy, private equity, or other investment companies, software, financial services, real estate, telecommunications, food and beverage, manufacturing, biotechnology, health care, and hospitality.

Hanna has experience in drafting, enforcing, and litigating executive and other employment agreements, separation or severance agreements, executive compensation and benefits agreements, incentive, retention and severance plans, nondisclosure, nondisparagement, noncompetition, nonsolicitation, and nonhire agreements.

Hanna litigates claims regarding tortious interference, unfair competition, misappropriation of trade secrets and confidential information, breach of employment agreement or other contract, defamation, intentional infliction of emotional distress, retaliation, harassment, discrimination and whistleblower claims, wages and hours (Fair Labor Standards Act and other overtime and minimum wage laws), as well as public policy or contract-based claims, and any employment agency audits and enforcement actions.

Employers call on Hanna for practical advice and counsel regarding employment issues, decisions, and risks. This includes best practices and training and otherwise handling: trade secret protection and restrictive covenant drafting; internal and external investigations and audits; compliance reviews of diversity (DEI) or other employment programs; layoff and restructuring programs (including WARN Act), furloughs, voluntary separations or retirement programs; handling due diligence and representations regarding employment issues in mergers and acquisitions; classification issues including employees and contractors, as well as joint employment (co-employment) with staffing, or affiliated companies; disability, religious, gender, and pregnancy accommodations, and interactive process; leaves of absence (including FMLA, ADA and workers compensation); ethics, conflicts of interest, and related compliance training; workplace violence or misconduct; incentive compensation, bonus, and commission programs; background checks, applicant testing, artificial intelligence, and other hiring screens and processes; and multistate employer handbooks and policies and agreements.

REPRESENTATIVE MATTERS
