Josh focuses on the state regulation of electric utilities. He helps clients navigate the dynamic ecosystem of rapidly evolving regulatory, legislative, and policy frameworks governing the energy industry.

OVERVIEW

Leveraging broad, multijurisdictional experience, Josh has advocacy experience in nearly every type of regulatory proceeding covering the range of utility regulation, including base rate cases, integrated resource plans (IRPs), resource certifications, utility mergers, and performance-based rulemakings. He advises clients on mission-critical rate litigation matters, grid investment plan proposals, innovative performance-based ratemaking issues, and cost recovery strategies for strategic renewable investments, including battery energy storage, solar power, and legacy T&D projects.

Josh has represented clients in regulatory proceedings across the southeastern U.S., including before the Georgia Public Service Commission, North Carolina Utilities Commission, Florida Public Service Commission, Public Service Commission of South Carolina, and the Virginia State Corporation Commission.

REPRESENTATIVE MATTERS

- Developed and secured regulatory approval for tariffs, programs, special contracts, and other frameworks to support the integration and provision of electric service to large load customers.
- Represented a public utility in the certification of a $1 billion battery energy storage project portfolio before Georgia Public Service Commission.
- Represented a public utility in a Percentage of Income Payment Plan rate proceeding before the Virginia State Corporation Commission.
- Represented a public utility in base rate proceedings before the Florida Public Service Commission.
- Represented and counseled two public utility operating companies in base rate case proceedings before the North Carolina Public Utilities Commission.
- Represented a public utility in a rate case and negotiated a settlement whereby the state commission approved, without modification, a three-year accounting order that provided the stable and constructive rates and timely recovery needed to make the significant capital investments deemed appropriate by the state commission.
- Counseled two public utilities in rulemaking proceedings to implement performance-based regulation.
- Assisted in representing and counseling two public utility operating companies in base rate case proceedings
