

Kevin C. Greene

Retired Partner

OVERVIEW

Before retiring, Kevin focused his practice on helping regulated electric utilities navigate their complex and ever-evolving challenges. His perspective helped clients develop sound risk management and growth strategies in creating value for all stakeholders. Kevin applied a highly nuanced understanding of the ways that regulation is integral to and thus affected every aspect of his clients' businesses to assist his clients with every legal aspect of their businesses. Over the past several decades, Kevin served as regulatory counsel for two of the largest utilities in the U.S. His clients viewed him as a go-to problem solver both for routine, day-to-day issues and for regulatory strategies in bet-the-company mergers and acquisitions, litigations and administrative hearings. He worked closely with executives to develop, plan and execute key initiatives, including integrated resource plans, plant certifications and cost recovery strategies for nuclear, coal and gas-fired power plants, as well as renewable generation and demand-side programs. His vast knowledge of the industry also enabled him to anticipate and prepare his clients for potential areas of risk or exposure.
