Clients in the chemical, mechanical, and medical device fields benefit from Mark's wide-ranging experience in preparing and prosecuting patents and trademarks across multiple jurisdictions worldwide.

OVERVIEW

Mark brings more than 20 years of experience in all aspects of intellectual property law. His work includes development and protection, including vendor and joint development agreements; worldwide prosecution, counseling, licensing, and other transactions; and enforcement and litigation.

Mark's experience encompasses both traditional intellectual property fields, such as patents, trademarks, copyrights, and trade secrets, as well as increasingly important related areas, including information technology, privacy, cybersecurity, and artificial intelligence. He represents a diverse client base, ranging from major banks, oil companies, and medical device manufacturers to smaller software development companies, technology-based marketing firms, oil and gas service companies, and startups.

Mark provides comprehensive IP counseling relating to the entire lifecycle of intellectual property. He advises on vendor and joint development agreements, licensing and commercial distribution, the sale of goods and services incorporating technology, infringement, validity opinions, and design around programs. Mark also handles the intellectual property, information technology, and privacy and cybersecurity aspects of large corporate transactions.
