Mark is a strong and seasoned advocate and legal adviser. His clients praise him as thoughtful, dedicated, thorough, and effective.

OVERVIEW

Mark has been advising and defending employers since 1992. He represents local, regional, and national employers across a wide range of industries in all aspects of employment and labor law, with an emphasis on the unique challenges facing employers with operations in California.

As lead counsel, Mark has successfully handled and resolved hundreds of employment-related disputes in state and federal courts. His proven track record of litigation success makes him an effective, practical legal adviser to employers seeking to comply with local, state, and federal workplace laws (for example, wage and hour compliance, and class action and PAGA defense; discrimination, harassment, and retaliation issues; workplace investigations; and traditional labor relations, including collective bargaining negotiations and grievance resolution).

Mark also has extensive experience with unfair competition claims and protection of trade secrets, helping companies protect their information assets through effective policies, enforceable agreements and, when necessary, litigation.

Before practicing law, Mark distinguished himself in his undergraduate and graduate studies. In college, he completed three major courses of study – philosophy, religion, and psychology. He graduated cum laude, received honors in religion, and earned a bachelor's degree. After college, Mark worked for two years in computer software development for the trade association industry. He then earned his J.D. at the College of William & Mary, where he served as the managing editor for the Law Review and was admitted to the Order of the Coif after graduating in the top five percent of his class.

After law school, Mark served in the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia as a law clerk for the Honorable Rebecca Beach Smith. He then began his employment and labor law practice with Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, where he was an associate and of counsel for eight years.
